HOBOKEN, N.J.--(BUSINESS WIRE)--John Wiley and Sons Inc., (NYSE:JWA) (NYSE:JWB) is pleased to announce the migration of Wiley Online Library to Atypon’s Literatum online publishing platform. This transition reinforces Wiley’s commitment to enabling the success of its customers and partners while advancing research, discovery, and learning.

The new Wiley Online Library provides a best-in-class online experience for researchers, connecting them to the most relevant scholarly content to support their research goals. Wiley Online Library is home to one of the world’s broadest and deepest multidisciplinary collections of online resources, including content from life, health, physical, and social sciences, as well as the humanities. It supports and delivers access to over 6 million articles, 1,600 journals, 200 reference works, and 21,000 online books.

The migration to Literatum provides an optimized online research experience allowing users to discover and access the extensive breadth of scholarly content on Wiley Online Library. The new platform features predictive search and filters to quickly surface the most relevant content, prominent institutional branding, automated recommendations for related articles, and a fully mobile, responsive design and navigation supporting research on any device.

“Literatum reflects the combined input and business needs of the hundreds of other publishers and societies whose content we host, and that comprehensive functionality will now benefit the entire community of societies and researchers who use Wiley Online Library,” said Georgios Papadopoulos, Atypon’s Founder and CEO. “Similarly, all members of the Literatum community will benefit from enhancements that Wiley makes to the platform.”

Executive Vice President of Research at Wiley, Judy Verses, stressed the company’s mission to provide researchers with the critical tools necessary to advance their research. “Researchers are at the core of our mission. We will continue to enhance our services and platform to drive our users, customers and partners to the forefront of research.”
